Dr. Pritchett Explains Its Acceptance by the Carnegie Foundation.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Charlottesville, Va., June 15 .- In transmitting to President Alderman the action of the executive committee in admitting the University of Virginia to the list of accepted institutions of the Carnegie foundation for the ad vancement of teaching, Dr. Henry S Pritchett wrote: "The committee has been influenced not only by the scholarly work of the university in the past and the eminence which the university has made in the mission, and in particular by the work which has been done by the university committee realizes that a State university should relate itself directly to the system of high schools of its State, and it believes that the leadership which the university has shown in these matters will result not only in greater educational efficiency to the whole system of schools in Virginia, but that it will likewise result in furnishing to the university a far better prepared group of students."

"I am gratified at this action of the foundation." Dr. Alderman replied, "not solely because it secures against want the old age of men who have given their lives to an uniucrative but noble profession, but in a higher sense because such action signalizes the accomplishment by this university of a committee realizes that a State univer-complishment by this university of a great undertaking which it set out to bring to pass nearly seven years ago. It now occupies a consistent and logical relation to the system of secondary education with which it is allied, and it has also concluded legislation by which it occupies consistent and logical relation in its graduate school to the college and higher institutions. Such action of the foundation is an added action of the foundation is an added relation in its graduate school to the college and higher institutions. Such action of the foundation is an added testimony to the fact that standards of admission established have been admissioned with integrity and good sense. I wish to express to the foundation assurances of our belief that the foundation has hel, d powerfully in enabling the university and other universities in this country to establish and maintain such standards as to unify the whole educational process. I, too, hope that the relations between the foundation and the university may be one of material help and service in all educational development."
